

Andrew Bauermeister, DPT, CIDN

Senior Physical Therapist

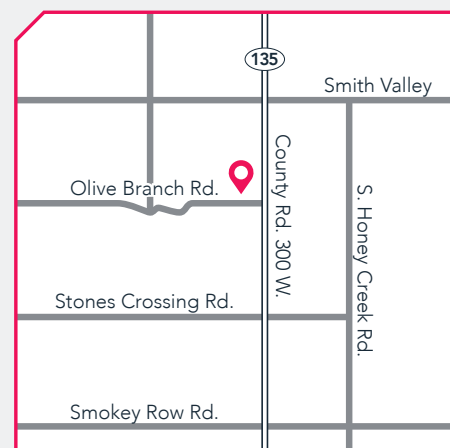

Andrew Bauermeister enjoys helping people turn movement into progress, whether that means reducing pain, rebuilding strength or returning to the activities that are important to them. His own interest in health and fitness drew him to physical therapy and a career where exercise and movement can help people reach meaningful goals.

His approach begins with listening and making sure patients feel understood.

From there, he works to build trust that allows him to encourage and challenge patients as they work toward their goals and progress through rehabilitation.

Andrew is certified in dry needling and Functional Capacity Evaluations and has served as an APTA-certified clinical instructor. He earned his undergraduate degree from Indiana University and his Doctor of Physical Therapy from IUPUI, now known as IU Indianapolis.
